Europahaus Aurich

Europahaus Aurich (official name: "Deutsch-Niederländische Heimvolkshochschule") is a German-Dutch institution for further education, located in Aurich, in the northwest of Germany, near the Dutch border and close to the North Sea. Europahaus Aurich was founded in 1956, with the aim of achieving reconciliation between Dutch and German people after both World Wars. Over the years, Europahaus Aurich became an education centre for young people and adults, doing national and international work. To this day, its work is based on the values of peace and solidarity. Europahaus Aurich offers seminars, where participants can exchange information, learn from each other and learn about different points of view. It is our firm believe that people can learn new perspectives through common experience. Europahaus Aurich has several seminar rooms and accommodation for up to 90 people.
